

The Black Hat

30-minute challenge!

Your task is to re-write the story *in your own words BUT you only have 10 minutes to plan and 20 minute to write. Tomorrow, I want you to edit and improve so don't worry too much about mistakes or changes until the next lesson.

In this first draft, you must: have a clear beginning, middle and END (end is in bold because you must finish the story in the time given) you can write in either first person (imagine you are the boy who finds the black hat so use personal pronouns like I, me, my) OR you can write in third person (as if you are the narrator so use 3rd person pronouns like he, him, they).

Use the story map completed last week and the vocabulary you have seen to help
Have you got your 30 minute timer ready to go...?

*in your own words means you can take parts out that you don't think are important to the story.
You can type or write your story, it's entirely up to you!

The Black Hat

Planning (remember, just a quick reminder of what happens in the story):

*in your own words means you can take parts out that you don't think are important to the story.
You can type or write your story, it's entirely up to you!

[illegible]

in your own words means you can take parts out that you don't think are important to the story.

You can type or write your story, it's entirely up to you!

[illegible]

in your own words means you can take parts out that you don't think are important to the story.

You can type or write your story, it's entirely up to you!

[illegible]

in your own words means you can take parts out that you don't think are important to the story.

You can type or write your story, it's entirely up to you!

[illegible]

in your own words means you can take parts out that you don't think are important to the story.

You can type or write your story, it's entirely up to you!