

YEAR 3

WORKING AT GREATER DEPTH

Runaways

When the first rays of light fell upon Hannah and John in the shop doorway, they decided to trust Dr. Barnardo. Hannah wanted to go there because Dr. Barnardo was a caring man and offerd them hot food and a place of refuge. Before Dr. Barnardo left Hannah and John in the shop doorway, he said to them, "No destitute child ever refused admition."And he left. They were very wary of Dr. Barnardo, but if you are poor, and don't have a single penny to youre name, then sometimes you have to put your trust in strangers. And so it was that Hannah and John organized a trip to Dr. Barnardo's home, on that cold but bright morning.

Hannah and John trudged along stepney causeway, they saw children, babies and adults in all sorts of suffering! Good job me and John aren't those sort of people. Thought Hannah. The poor people's only companion were the rats scurrying from one building to another in search of food. Hannah was terrified at the sight of if that might happen, if Dr. Barnardo didn't want to keep them. The two children cautiously walked on until they saw a metal bridge with a sign. Hannah and John walked on, awed. The man is actually real! Thought John.

Adverbs used for effect and to develop characters

The two children ran up 5 big steps, but then paused in front of a huge front door with a brass knocker. Hannah stared at the house, which looked like a dream hotel to her. Hannah put John on her shoulders and John, becoming more weaker, pulled the brass knocker and banged it on the white but old door. Hannah put John on the smooth cobble-stone floor.

Adventurous, vocabulary used for precision

Fronted adverbials of time to move the action.

After a few minutes, the door swung open and there stood a lady in a starched uniform. She introduced herself and said her name was Matron. She also said no child is ever turned away. "You're are more than welcome to stay here!" said matron cheerily. Matron took them to the san, where they had a wash, got into clean clothes and had some warm tomato soup.

Inverted commas are used to open and close speech correctly

A wide range of conjunctions are used, resulting in sentences with more than one clause.
